Dr. Seibert is quite seriously ill at a hospital in New York, having ruptured a blood vessel, and an operation has been necessary.

Donations to the Hospital.

We have in our midst a most noble charity that perhaps gets less recognition than its merit entitles it to. The Montclair Hospital has been established for seven years. It is supported chiefly by the voluntary contributions of its friends, and affords medical and surgical assistance to many worthy people annually who would otherwise never receive it.

A very easy, but effective method of helping in the good work at little or no expense to the giver, is by the donation of fruit and vegetables from our gardens. The Hospital staff is in need of these things, and must buy them when they are not given, and almost every one can spare daily some small quantity of fruit or vegetables from their garden, and never miss them.

Let our citizens but bear this in mind and we are satisfied that the Hospital will have need to buy these necessities. The patients at the Hospital will bless the giver, and the remainder of the fruit and vegetables will taste better for the gift. All such donations should be delivered at the Hospital.

Another year of work at the Montclair Hospital is drawing to a close. During the time of the summer and fall months have been treated. Of these but thirty-three have paid any board, five hundred and twelve having been treated free. There have been thirty operations performed during the year, many serious. From these only two have died.

Good Home Hints.

A good rule for hangings is to have semitransparent stencils at the windows to admit light and medium weight portieres to admit air.

The very high buffet for dining room use has been relegated to obscurity, and low, broad ones, with swell fronts, are now considered very much better form.

Fireplace mantels of unglazed, ornamental brick are the very latest for hall, library or living room, but are particularly popular in the country. The large mantels are fitted with andirons for burning wood.

A late fancy is to have fancy chairs in wood or wicker, canopied with a bright green. This would be a good scheme to rejuvenate soiled porch chairs of last summer and make them look like the latest style.

For work or grille, with pendant curtains over the doorway, or in an arch, adds very much to the looks of a room. Agra, denim or albertine linen drapes nicely and are very suitable as hangings for this purpose.

The very latest way to hang curtains is to have a double rod and have each curtain across the other to about six inches from each side. They are then tied back about two-thirds of the way up, much higher than formerly.
